About the practice questions

This bank of 200 practice questions is designed to help you to prepare for the EnglishScore mobile English test. The questions are written to the same standard as the questions you will see in the exam, with answers and transcripts provided for each question.

The questions are divided into three sections:

- Grammar and vocabulary
- Reading
- Listening

Each section includes questions for the four CEFR levels that EnglishScore covers: A2, B1, B2, C1. At the end of each section, you will find the answers and the listening transcripts.

The questions cover the Personal, Public and Professional domains, using authentic language and contexts.

Note that EnglishScore is a mobile test, so the question format in the real test is different from what you see in this bank, e.g. in the mobile test, you will need to tap the correct answer for the multiple-choice questions. However, this question bank will help you to prepare and practise for the test and to understand the different question types we use in our test.

For more information about the test-taking experience and other useful information, please see the EnglishScore Core Skills Test Guide. You can also visit our website at www.englishscore.com.

B2 Reading practice questions

– Choose the best heading

Example

The director of an environmental think-tank has pointed to a new study as evidence that social policy has a role to play in the fight against global warming. Richard Wilcott, head of the Institute for Environment Research (IER), said the study found that the rate of global warming dropped in conjunction with historical events that slowed economic activity. Mr Wilcott said the study proved it was necessary to strictly control activities known to be linked to global warming. There is clear agreement in the scientific community that the effects of global warming will be increasingly harmful, so the government needs to respond promptly.

Choose the best heading for the text.

A. Immediate actions against global warming are needed ✓

B. The role of historical events in economic activity

C. The place of public policy to stop global warming

1

When the economy isn't going too well, most people would do anything to keep their jobs. But companies sometimes take advantage of this and become more demanding. The result is that we end up giving them more of our time than we should. So, we need to take a step back and consider just how much of our lives we want to dedicate to work. After all, if we are always working, when can we possibly have time to ourselves? We need to be able to relax for a while. Taking time to unwind is what keeps us healthy.

Choose the best heading for the text.

- A. Not everything is about work
- B. Hard work is the key to success
- C. Making sure your job is safe

Everyone's looked at the green spots, called 'mould', on bread, trying to decide whether to eat it or put it in the bin. With an estimated 6.6 million tonnes of food discarded by households every year, many unnecessarily, how can we know what's safe to eat? Any food can be contaminated as mould likes warm, moist conditions, but although not all mould is bad for us, we have no way of knowing which is which. Instead, we need to be better at planning our meals and should always cut mould out and save the rest of the food to prevent further waste.

Choose the best heading for the text.

- A. The environmental impact of food waste
- B. Food safety is critical in the home
- C. How we can avoid throwing food away

The mystery of why Neanderthals died out may have been solved. Scientists say it could have been something as simple as a common childhood illness. A new study has suggested that ear infections were responsible for their disappearance. Today, they can be simply treated with modern medicines like antibiotics. But the Neanderthals contracted many complications from ear infections, including breathing infections, hearing loss and pneumonia. The study published in The Anatomical Record journal found that the ears of Neanderthals were comparable to those of human children and did not change with age, as children's do.

Choose the best heading for the text.

- A. Were Neanderthal children born with hearing difficulties?
- B. Neanderthals may have been allergic to antibiotic treatments
- C. Common childhood illness may have killed off Neanderthals

The combination of a growing population and an increased number of migrant workers means that there is a shortage of places to live in most major cities. The usual response to this is to simply build more houses and blocks of flats. But there is little space in the city itself to build, so construction usually takes place on green areas in the outskirts. In some areas, forests are even being cleared to build new houses. This is a worrying trend for the future and one that must be stopped if we want to do anything about protecting nature.

Choose the best heading for the text.

- A. Effective solutions for current problems in cities
- B. Solving one problem but making another one worse
- C. Imaginative ways to solve the housing crisis

You will be in charge of new products for the length of their development. You will supervise all aspects of product creation, marketing and evolution. You will also ensure the product and the marketing efforts to support it match the company's goals and strategies. Among other things, this will include researching customer demand for products and managing the development of marketing activities and advertising strategies. Finally, you will also be required to submit regular reports about product income predictions and results. This will help us as a company to stay up to date with our competitors and competing products.

Choose the best heading for the text.

- A. Job description
- B. Job application
- C. Annual review report

The first moon landing was in 1969, and now it has been suggested that we should go back. However, this time, the plan is to stay for a while longer. Scientists argue that a base on the moon can be used to test out some of the difficulties that people going to Mars will have to deal with. But first, they will need to develop all the equipment, from a spacecraft to get there to accommodation once they arrive and a means of transport for the surface. So, they won't be living on the moon just yet.

Choose the best heading for the text.

- A. Early plans to go back to the moon
- B. Mars mission plans are revealed
- C. Moon vehicle to be built

Hi Akram. You asked about the new booking policy. It seems to be operating quite effectively after a few issues at the beginning, so I'm grateful you allowed me to make those changes as things are definitely moving faster now. Accounts have reported that they are able to track money from bookings with less difficulty, and the reservations staff have been quite positive about it. Jack from IT has made some changes on the system that make life easier. I've got some figures on how this has affected company finances. If you like, I can send them to you. Paula.

Choose the best heading for the text.

- A. Financial benefits of the new booking system
- B. Feedback on the new booking system
- C. Operating the new booking system

To provide you with the best possible service, we must process information about you.

This includes your full name, home address and telephone number, as well as your email address. We do not share this information with third parties, nor do we allow users to access information on other users. We may, however, occasionally be forced to share information with law enforcement depending on the regulations of your country of residence. You can send a request to delete all the information we hold on you at any time, but please note that this will result in your account no longer being accessible.

Choose the best heading for the text.

- A. Company guidance on how to close a user account
- B. Company notice regarding privacy rules
- C. Company use of personal information for legal purposes

The statues of Easter Island are best known for their deep-set eyes and long ears. They also have impressive multitonne hats, made from a different kind of rock. Quite how these pukao, as the hats are known, were transported and placed on top of the statues has long been a puzzle. But now American archaeologists believe they have a clearer understanding. The giant hats were moved with minimal effort and resources using a slope and rope technique, they say. The fact that they successfully assembled these monuments is a clear signal of the engineering skills of the ancient Rapanui people.

Choose the best heading for the text.

- A. How hats got onto the Easter Island statues
- B. New statues discovered on Easter Island
- C. Engineers duplicate lost building skills

Home working has become more popular in recent years. This is the result of the demands of the modern lifestyle and people's desire to improve their work–life balance. It is also beneficial for employers. This is because it reduces costs in several ways, including removing the need for large offices. However, home working is actually not a specifically modern concept. Throughout much of history, highly skilled jobs such as metal work and sewing were done at home, and it wasn't until the growth of corporations that large groups of people started to work together in a single office building.

Choose the best heading for the text.

- A. How companies can decrease spending
- B. Why home working is good for most people
- C. How work locations have changed over time

Every job advert attracts so many applications. That's why it's no surprise that companies are trying new ways to choose their staff. One of the most fashionable ways is using personality tests. The candidate simply answers a series of questions, and if their answers match what the company is looking for, they pass to the next round. However, it is extremely difficult to judge if someone is a good match for the role from such methods. Perhaps companies should just invite the candidate for an interview and then decide whether they're suitable or not.

Choose the best heading for the text.

- A. An easy way to pick extra staff
- B. A popular but unsuitable system
- C. An impossible decision for bosses

During the past year, we began to expand our product range beyond just the mobile phone market. Our new anti-theft devices launched during this year, with a total of six new products in these areas. In addition, we began working with app company 'Apptivate' to improve the quality of our present apps. We hope this will help us to compete with the biggest names in our industry. We have invested a large amount of money in developing and launching these areas and expect to see a rapid sales growth, especially in Asia. We also predict a large return on investment next year.

Choose the best heading for the text.

- A. Recent product developments
- B. Profits made from new products
- C. Moving away from traditional mobiles

Businesses often face huge challenges, and they don't always have the talent internally to be able to solve them. Areas such as performance, following regulations, tech support and brand image all require expert knowledge. This is where consultants come in useful. They are skilled at addressing particular problems at particular times and guiding companies towards the best possible outcome. They're expensive, but they're often worth it. If they do a good job, the company's problems are solved – and as they rely on being recommended by others to get work, they are usually motivated to do well.

Choose the best heading for the text.

- A. Finding the best consultant for your company's needs
- B. The hidden costs of hiring a consultant
- C. Why hiring a consultant is in a company's best interests

C1 Reading practice questions

– Answer the question

Example

Law targeting commerce tricks

A new law is being considered in the United Kingdom to target ‘scalpers’ – people who buy products and services online only to then sell them on to others for profit. Currently, it is illegal to purchase football game tickets and sell them for a higher price, but everything else is fair game for scalpers – including concert tickets, theatre tickets and even things like video game consoles or shoes. In fact, there are people who do this professionally: buying multiple things they know are low in stock, so they can sell them afterwards for double the price, or even more. These professional scalpers do this with the help of computer programs that can automatically buy products on their behalf as soon as they become available and before any regular customer can get their hands on them.

The biggest problem this proposed legislation faces is that it’s impossible to ban the sale of second-hand goods. Indeed, being able to sell items you don’t need – be they old or brand-new – is a fundamental right in the current capitalist system, and also pivotal to achieving sustainability goals. To bypass this issue, the government has suggested it will be focusing on the technologies used by scalpers instead. In effect, the goal is to stop scalpers from using programs to do their buying for them, creating a fairer system for all customers.

What about scalpers themselves? Many must be acutely aware that what they do is, although not currently illegal, certainly morally dubious. But as long as the law allows them to, the money’s probably just too good to give up.

Answer three questions about the text.

1. Why is 'scalping' such a big problem?

A. Because scalping creates supply issues for companies

B. Because scalpers are using an unfair advantage to profit ✓

C. Because scalping is forcing businesses to raise their prices

C1 Reading practice questions

– Answer the question

1 Finding happiness at work

Throughout their lives, most people are engaged in the pursuit of happiness, both in their personal lives as well as at work. The question of what workplace happiness looks like, however, has puzzled psychologists and career advisors. According to recent research, and contrary to popular belief, being offered a better salary can only help so much. Indeed, there is a host of other factors that can affect workplace happiness, such as the field a person works in, their company or their role. Studies have shown that some fields, such as those involving the care of animals, can make people content in ways other fields simply can't. Likewise, a sense of community and a cohesive team of co-workers can lift spirits in ways other perks can't. This will probably come as a surprise to poorly skilled managers, but among most employees, it is common knowledge.

What is a common misconception according to the text?

- A. That offering workers more money makes them happy
- B. That work benefits are less important than a close-knit team
- C. That it's impossible to make people happy in most fields

Pollution from ships

Most people are surprised to learn that ships are significant sources of air pollution globally. This is predominantly due to their fuel. Thick, black and scary-looking, “bunker” fuel is made from the remains of the fuel production process and contains high amounts of sulphur. This produces poisonous gases and fine particles that can harm human health and the environment, especially in coastal areas with high levels of traffic. As more evidence points to the risks of burning bunker fuel, the global industry is launching a major change in its fuel supply. Starting in January, the International Maritime Organization will require that all fuels used in ships contain no more than 0.5 per cent sulphur. The cap is a significant reduction from the existing limit of 3.5 per cent. Public health experts estimate that once the sulphur cap takes effect, it would prevent roughly 150,000 early deaths and 7.6 million childhood asthma cases globally each year.

Why is the change in fuel happening now?

- A. There is now enough proof of the harm caused
- B. There has been enough development in the area
- C. There is a need for ships to be closer to land

Job interviews

While job candidates often focus on preparing for the possible interview questions they'll be asked, body language is rarely given a thought. However, initial judgements about a person are formed in as little as 20 seconds and are based almost entirely on body language. So how can a candidate ensure they leave a positive impression? Good eye contact communicates confidence, though getting the balance right without coming off as threatening can be tricky. A slight tilt of the head as the interviewer talks shows that the applicant is listening carefully, while leaning in slightly also indicates interest. Finally, avoiding excessive use of gestures while talking encourages interviewers to focus on the words, instead of the body language. All of this may seem obvious, but most candidates get at least one thing wrong, so remember: practice makes perfect.

What advice does the text give to job candidates?

- A. Maintain eye contact throughout the interview
- B. Rehearse to improve your body language
- C. Focus on listening carefully instead of talking

Supermarket activities

A small chain of food stores in Finland has just celebrated its tenth anniversary, and we have spoken to Managing Director Saara Martinen to find out the key to their success, especially in the face of fierce competition from massive retailers. As she explained, a common customer complaint was always that, even in a recession, many essential foodstuffs were still beyond most budgets: “If I could find a way of dropping those prices and get the message out, then I felt sure those on strict budgets would be interested.

We set about a social media campaign and very shortly we had thousands of followers”. So how did Martinen manage to maintain her low prices while keeping the business going? “We came up with the notion of making products available that are close to their so-called best-before dates. This still allows a few more days before they have to be consumed or discarded.”

To what does Saara Martinen credit the success of her company?

- A. Finding a way to source products during a recession
- B. Identifying and exploiting a gap in the market
- C. Determining the best approach to social media marketing

In the third century BC, a massive statue was erected on the Mediterranean island of Rhodes. After surviving a long siege, the inhabitants of Rhodes decided to build this extraordinary statue in honour of Helios, one of the gods who ruled over Greece. The statue was said to have needed 12 tons of bronze for its construction. It became known as the 'Colossus' for its size, and it took 12 years to complete. Little is known about its manufacture or even its exact size; the Roman writer Pliny the Younger put its height at '70 cubits' – around 110 feet. However, we have no idea what the statue looked like or where it was erected. Sadly, the statue was not destined to last. Only fifty years later, an earthquake destroyed most of the city of Rhodes, including the Colossus. The bronze remains were eventually carried away by Syrian scrap merchants several centuries later.

What do we know for sure about the statue?

- A. It was built by a small number of metal workers
- B. It was erected in the harbour at Rhodes
- C. Its name reflects an aspect of its appearance

What is leadership?

These days, leadership is a common term in business. A quick search online will reveal thousands of videos and blogs on how to be an inspirational leader. Sadly, however, being inspirational at work is harder than listening to an online talk. This is because leadership is considered distinct from management insofar as the former is more strategic and about communicating values and aspirations, while the latter concerns efficiency and being effective. One of the mistakes that many aspiring leaders, especially those who are new to leadership roles, make is confusing these two concepts. As such, they tend to pay more attention to what people in the company are doing rather than where the company itself is going. The result of this, which is all too frequent nowadays, is an organisation which lacks leadership, and such organisations run the risk of becoming disorganised quite quickly.

What does the writer say the main problem with leadership in business is?

- A. That the qualities necessary for leaders aren't clear
- B. That the writing on the subject is largely unhelpful
- C. That people wish to achieve it but can rarely realise it

The new face of news

Social media has revolutionised how rapidly events can be shared. Traditional news outlets stand no chance of competing, so they often end up picking up stories from social media to publish. However, these companies need to be cautious as they don't know what the original source is trying to convey. Another issue is that the original author of the content is its owner and has a say in how it is used and is likely to be reluctant to allow media outlets to use it. Because of this, it is increasingly important that people should be critical and take everything they read with a pinch of salt. Mainstream media may favour one viewpoint or another, but at least they try to ensure that only the truth is printed. The same cannot be said for every single user of social media.

What does the text suggest about people posting content on social media?

- A. They may be aware that what they're posting is based on lies
- B. They are doing so to make news outlets go out of business
- C. They are impartial and write about a range of opinions

Creating good passwords

The number of online accounts that the average person uses has increased rapidly in recent years, with each one requiring a password. As it's near impossible to remember multiple unique passwords by heart, a lot of us end up reusing the same passwords across different accounts. Unfortunately, this makes us vulnerable to 'hackers' – computer experts who try to access our accounts to steal our personal information. So how can we ensure that our sensitive data is safe? To begin with, experts agree that we must never use passwords based on things about us that a stranger could find out in a conversation or by looking around our house. A combination of lowercase and uppercase letters, numbers and symbols is advised – but avoid common tricks, such as replacing “a” with “@” and “l” with “1” or always capitalising the second letter. Finally, never reuse a password, though that's probably easier said than done!

Which of the following bad habits related to passwords does the text mention?

- A. Trying to remember multiple different passwords for all our online accounts
- B. Basing our passwords on things that are important to us and that others can guess
- C. Forgetting to use tricks to make passwords complicated, such as changing “l” to “1”

Using technology for nature research

Drones are small cameras that can be flown into the sky using a remote control and have become an increasingly important component of wildlife ecology research, by being used to spy on animals in the wild. Observing animals in their natural habitat can help us to understand how they behave and interact with their environment. It has enhanced our ability to track the location of nests, determine the size of bird groups and assess different types of habitats. It has even helped governments to protect animals from poachers, who can no longer steal animals in the wild without being identified. Despite these benefits, scientists have also posed serious questions about whether drones can disrupt nature. However, they have not provided solutions that are safer than drones or, indeed, the methods we relied on in the past to observe wildlife. One thing is for certain: drones are here to stay.

Which of the following benefits of drone use does the author mention?

- A. It has helped to explain why birds live so close to each other
- B. It has helped to determine the size of different habitats
- C. It has made it easier to catch criminals who target wildlife

10 Teaching philosophy in schools

It has been argued that philosophy is a subject better suited for university-level studies, but this couldn't be further from the truth. It's something we need on a daily basis to solve problems and make better decisions. The question, then, is why philosophy isn't more present in many education systems. Without philosophy, there'd be no original thought or new ideas. We'd be stuck in the past because no one would have the initiative to try and improve society. We wouldn't worry about anything other than the present, either. This is dangerous because failing to link present experiences to those in the past and future means that individuals don't create meaning from them and therefore cannot understand what these experiences can teach them. It is this understanding, though, that helps individuals find their voice and create new paths. Studying philosophy, therefore, creates individuals who can identify problems and build a better society for everyone.

What does the writer say individuals need to do to learn from their experiences?

- A. Relate their experiences to other events in their lives
- B. Be more creative when coming up with solutions to old problems
- C. Focus more on their own problems instead of helping others

The future of recruitment

It could soon be commonplace that a computer, instead of a human, asks the first series of questions for those who are applying for jobs via recruitment agencies. Many recruiters say that automation could be helpful for handling the more routine, yet time-consuming, areas of recruitment. For example, some technical companies are starting to develop systems that can manage recruiters' initial duties, such as matching the most relevant CVs to a position, asking applicants where they would like to work and so on. This enables preliminary, basic questions to be dealt with by automated technology since that is not a key task for a human recruiter. Unfortunately, this could eventually mean fewer human recruiting positions. The human recruiters who survive will need to focus on the tasks that computers are unable to perform, such as conducting a live interview or judging personality and values.

How does the writer feel about automated recruitment?

- A. It is a welcome development for all involved
- B. It is endangering future human employment
- C. It is an unnecessary feature of recruitment activity

Extreme sports

Evolution has programmed our genes to perform activities that will enhance the probability of survival in dangerous situations. This means that participating in extreme sports, such as skydiving and climbing, doesn't always seem logical. In fact, extreme sports is often viewed as abnormal, as it involves taking unnecessary risks that may lead to death. However, our body also has reward mechanisms that are stimulated when we experience risky activities. One such 'reward' is the chemical dopamine. High levels of dopamine affect our mental processes and lead to feelings of well-being, and so, this "natural high" becomes the reason to participate in such sports. These positive effects are so strong and desired that they outweigh the high risk of serious injury or death. Additionally, repeated exposure to fearful situations may lead to familiarity towards the danger and, gradually, a more positive emotional response. This leads some people to seek new and bigger thrills.

What is the main purpose of this text?

- A. To challenge the psychology behind extreme sport participation
- B. To outline the brain's role in motivation to do extreme sports
- C. To evaluate the mental health of extreme sports participants

A2 Transcript

1

Male: Excuse me, could you help me? I'm trying to find Franco's pizza place.

Female: Um, sorry, I don't think I know it.

Male: Well, my friend said it's near the Post Office, do you know where that is?

Female: Oh, yes, I remember now. Take that road on the left, where you see the supermarket, after 100 metres you'll see Franco's right opposite the Post Office, next to the hairdressers.

Male: Great, thank you.

2

Female: So, which way do we need to go now?

Male: Well, it says here to turn right, but the park is over there.

Female: So, are we lost?

Male: Um, I don't think so. Oh wait, I've got the map the wrong way round.

Female: Oh, and, is it straight on?

Male: Let's see, the park is there now, so we need to go left.

Female: Are you sure?

Male: Yeah, of course.

3

Female: Do you have any plans for your holiday yet?

Male: Yeah, finally. We're off to Greece in July, I booked two weeks in a resort in Mexico, but then they closed the hotel.

Female: That's terrible, did you get your money back?

Male: Yeah, luckily, but finding something else was difficult, all the cheap deals were in Spain but we didn't want to go there again. At least we're going somewhere new.

4

Male: To go into town, well, there's a bus that leaves from the bus stop over there, it comes every fifteen minutes but it doesn't go right into the centre. You have to walk for about ten minutes after you get off. It might be better to take the tram, it takes you right into the town centre in twenty minutes, but they don't run regularly today.

Male: Hi, it's Phil, would you like to see the new horror movie on Thursday evening?

Female: I'd like to but I'm working late on Thursday. What about Friday evening, I'm free then?

Male: No, I'm playing tennis with my brother on Friday. How about Wednesday, are you free then?

Female: Yes, I'll be home by 18:00.

Male: Great, the film starts at 20:00, so I'll pick you up at 19:30?

Female: Thanks, bye.

Male: Bye.

6

Female: Hi Mr Beston, this is Olivia from MCB Computers, I'm calling about the laptop you left with us this morning. We've had a look and you need new memory, we don't have any in the shop, so we'll order it. It should take three days to arrive and then we can repair it the same day. Please call us back before we close today to confirm that this is okay.

7

Male: Morning everyone, before we start our presentation today, we have some safety information. If you hear the fire alarm, you need to go out to the nearest exit as quickly as you can, and go towards the car park. Our meeting point is just next to the café across the road. You'll see the sign as soon as you walk past the library. Remember, do not stop to pick up your things.

8

Male: Good morning, this is the accounts department, can I help you?

Female: Oh hi, this is Francesca Suarez, is Marta there please?

Male: I'm sorry, she's on the phone with a client.

Female: I see, could you give her a message please, we have a meeting this afternoon but I'm going to be running about, um, ten minutes late.

Male: Sure, could you give me your name again please?

9

Female: Here is a traffic announcement for the West Chester area, there is slow traffic today on the A59 between Station Road and Beaston Road. This is because roadworks are slowing cars down. There are also reports of cows in the road, on the A55 near the Northampton services. Please drive carefully and keep your eyes open for animals. Traffic on the M9 is running as normal.

10

Male: Do you want to go for dinner tonight?

Female: I can't, I have a basketball match at 19:00.

Male: Really, I didn't know you play?

Female: Yeah, I've been on the team for a few months now. I joined because I was terrible at football and they asked me to leave.

Male: That's terrible.

Female: Oh, it's fine, I wasn't good at tennis either, at least now I've found a sport I can play.

11

Female: Lots of my friends ask me to play tennis or join their football team, I say, 'No thanks, I prefer to go for a walk.' I go out into the countryside where it's peaceful and I completely relax. Sports are fun, they keep you fit and you can make lots of friends, but for me a long walk is better than anything.

Male: What are we having for dinner tonight, Angela?

Female: I don't know, I'm not really hungry, I had a huge pizza for lunch. Why don't you make a sandwich?

Male: I don't want a sandwich, I want a hot meal.

Female: You can finish the chicken we had yesterday with some salad.

Male: Okay, I'll do that.

1

Male: Hi, I'd like to enroll my children for swimming lessons.

Female: Okay, right, let's see. What proficiency level are they?

Male: I think they're both intermediate.

Female: Great, now the intermediate lessons are at 16:00 or 16:30, and they last for 30 minutes.

Male: How is the availability on Wednesdays?

Female: Oh, I'm sorry, there is only one space available on Wednesdays, can you do another day?

Male: Thursday is a possibility, can we book the later one?

Female: It looks like we have space then, so let me take some details.

2

Male: I'm going to the supermarket, what do we need?

Female: Oh, um, I don't know, let's look. We have lots of potatoes, some rice and peppers.

Male: Oh okay, don't forget your whole family is coming around for dinner tomorrow, do we have enough pasta for everyone?

Female: Um, for six people, yes, I think so, but we need a sauce, so get some tomatoes and garlic.

Male: Do we still have onions from last week?

Female: Err, yes we do, so that's everything then.

3

Female: The government has repeated its warnings about the weather for the next few days. The entire country is expecting heavy rain and strong winds. There are already flood warnings in place for much of Wales and the South West. All trains in these areas have been suspended. During this time, do not leave your home unless it is absolutely necessary, and do not call the police unless it is a real emergency. Regular updates will be made on radio, television, Internet and via text message.

4

Female: I think somebody stole my bank card details yesterday.

Male: Oh no, how could that happen?

Female: Well, the bank said it was probably when I paid for the taxi from the airport, returning from holiday.

Male: Has any money been stolen from your account?

Female: No, the bank was fantastic, they noticed an unusual payment and stopped it.

Male: Then what happened?

Female: I did some shopping this morning, but my bank card didn't work, so I had to phone the bank and that was when I found out.

Male: Thank goodness the bank acted quickly.

5

Male: And now it's time to welcome today's guest on the show. Good morning to award-winning author Aisha Ali. Hi Aisha.

Female: Hi David, thanks for having me, I've always wanted to be on the radio.

Male: Excellent, so tell us more about your latest project.

Female: Well, I was contacted by a media company who wants to turn my most recent book into a TV show. So, I'm busy working on the adaptation.

Male: Excellent stuff, will you have an acting part?

Female: I doubt it, they get professionals to do the acting.

6

Male: I'll be glad when the weekend comes, I've had so much work this week.

Female: Me too, I have two jobs to finish by tomorrow.

Male: Really, I managed to finish most of mine, do you need any help with anything?

Female: That's so nice, um, could you possibly do some of the statistical analysis for one of the jobs?

Male: I'm sure I can manage that, if you send me the data, I will start in the morning.

Female: Fantastic, I can't do it at the weekend, as I'm going away.

7

Female: Excuse me, do you know where I can buy a newspaper?

Male: Let me think, oh yes, you can get one at Piccadilly Train Station.

Female: Thanks, how do I get there? I'm not from around here.

Male: Can you see that large yellow building over there, the one with the gardens?

Female: Yes.

Male: That's the swimming baths, if you turn right there and walk about 100 yards, you'll see the station on the left, you can't miss it, it's opposite the library.

Female: Thanks, I'll do that.

8

Male: I used to share my apartment with a friend, but not anymore. At the start we got on really well, we both liked the same sort of computer games and I often lent him my games, but after awhile I realised that every time I went into the kitchen, there were dirty plates in the sink and the cooker was a mess. I usually had to clean it all up. then last month he didn't pay his rent, that was it, I told him to leave.

9

Male: Oh hi Jules, have you seen Daniela anywhere?

Female: No, not since early this morning, she was at the staff meeting we had earlier.

Male: I wasn't at that meeting, I was supposed to see her at the gym at 10:00, but she never turned up.

Female: Do you have her mobile number?

Male: Yes, she gave it to me yesterday at the reception, I'll give her a call now, thanks.

10

Male: It was a complete nightmare actually, they almost didn't let me board the plane because I filled out the passport information on the website with the wrong information. Everything else was okay, then I put March instead of February for my birthday, it's on 29th you see, and most systems only let you put 29th January or March. I'm usually so careful, they let me through in the end, but it was a very stressful start to the holiday.

11

Female: I'm getting pretty annoyed about Sam's homework.

Male: Why, isn't it challenging enough?

Female: No, that isn't the issue, sometimes it doesn't make any sense and even if it does, it often isn't give a mark or there isn't any feedback, so he has no idea whether he did it properly or not. I'm getting more and more annoyed and he's becoming more and more upset.

Male: Sounds like the pair of us need to talk to his teacher, have you contacted him?

Female: Hello everybody, and welcome to Clifton College, I am your course director. Now, please put your mobile phones away for a moment and listen, because I have some important information for you. But first of all, I have a question, does everyone here have a student identity card, and a college Internet account? On the card if you have one, you should see your name, student number and college email address. If you don't have a student card, please put your hand up so I can see you.

Female: Good morning, can I help you?

Male: Yes, I understand you're having problems with your dishwasher?

Female: No, not us. Maybe it's the family next door? We're having problems with our washing machine.

Male: Oh, my mistake, yes, on my list it's a washing machine, sorry. I'm Antonio and I work for Horlicks.

Female: Do you have any identification with you?

Male: Yes, of course, here's official ID and the company card. You can call the office if you'd like to confirm.

Female: No, that seems fine, okay, come in.

1

Female: Oh wow, I love that film, those fight scenes were fantastic.

Male: Really, they didn't seem a little forced to you? And at times it seemed like they ignored the rules of physics.

Female: That was just down to poor special effects. It's a safe bet to say that they're not winning any awards for that one.

Male: Well, they won't win anything for the acting either, it was painful to watch Johnny White at times.

Female: I'll admit that perhaps it wasn't his best film, but you have to expect that sometimes actors accept roles that they're not suitable for.

Male: Well, maybe he should've waited for something more suitable then.

2

Male: So, can you tell us a bit about yourself and why you're suitable for this role?

Female: I've got a strong background in the industry because I did pharmacology at university, I was even lucky enough to get a six month work placement in a company which specialises in heart medication. While I was there, I was on rotation so to speak, I moved around different areas and departments getting some amazing hands-on experience along the way.

Male: Which area did you like the most?

Female: Sales was very interesting but I had a real passion for the research side and I hope that that's what I can work on here.

3

Female: Where are you going on holiday this year Simon?

Male: I haven't really decided yet, somewhere quiet I guess, with some decent weather, get away from all this rain.

Female: Like, a holiday on a sunny tropical beach?

Male: That would be great, but my wife doesn't like the seaside, she can't stand the sand.

Female: So, where do you usually go?

Male: Well, for the last couple of years we've been going to places with a bit of history, Rome, Athens, places like that, but this year my wife has said she'd like a more active holiday. So, I think we may go backpacking in Patagonia, if we can afford it.

Female: Good morning Mr Schmitt, I'm Maggie Harman, CEO of Mars Holdings, please take a seat.

Male: Thank you, nice place you have here.

Female: Thanks, I understand you're here to discuss our new marketing plans?

Male: Yes, that's the idea, you'll have to leave the budgets and schedules to someone else, but I do have a few ideas about the campaign materials.

Female: We invested quite a lot of money in the creative side, are you suggesting you can do better?

Male: Well, given the sensitivity of your markets, I think some of your current video clips run the risk of upsetting potential clients.

Female: I see, perhaps you could give me some examples?

Female: Have you got those sales projections yet, Daniel?

Male: No Mrs Castro, I'm, I'm still working on them.

Female: They were supposed to be with me yesterday, Daniel.

Male: I know Mrs Castro, you, you'll have them tomorrow morning, I promise.

Female: It's not like you to get behind with your work Daniel, is everything alright?

Male: Yes, thank you Mrs Castro, well no, not really. My mum has not been very well recently and I, I've been having to look after her and my little sister. I get very tired.

Female: I see, I'll see if I can lighten your load for a couple of weeks, come back and see me in a couple of hours, will you?

Male:

Welcome to the company, my name's Jake and I'll be doing the introduction this morning. I'm sure you're aware that this is a fully functional location and therefore we have some rules we have to follow. Although we have an excellent safety record at this facility, we may be obliged to clear the area for a variety of reasons. If the alarm sounds, simply follow me and I'll lead you to a safe area. It's vital that you don't touch anything while I'm showing you around. Some pipes may be dangerously hot, other containers might be below freezing. Okay, let's get your protective equipment.

7

Male:

Okay, so looking back, 2018 was a great year for us. We managed to get 99% of all our services running on time, which is far better than any other network in the metropolitan area. Our drivers managed to keep our accident record spotless for the third year running, but we can still improve. I feel the key is appealing to environmentally conscious individuals who want to reduce their carbon footprint. We need a strong advertising campaign, ideally digital, directed at young people. They're the ones more likely to give up using their cars and use us instead.

8

Female: Are you going to this training session later?

Male: Yes, I think so, what's it on?

Female: Company image or something, sounds like a waste of time to me.

Male: I agree, what do they expect us to learn?

Female: No idea, probably how to make the right impression in e-mails and in meetings with customers, I really can't spare the time, but we have to go.

Male: I heard that they're going to launch a new logo, so maybe it has something to do with that?

Female: You could be right, hopefully it won't be too boring. Do you fancy a drink afterwards?

9

Female: Are your kids allowed to use their phones in class?, Mine aren't. In fact, my kid's school has a no phone policy, and that's great, at least I know they're not spending all day on social networks. But do you know what teens nowadays use their phones for? Everything. So, why not learning? I'm not saying we should get rid of books, far from it, but if kids are so hooked on these things, it might be a good idea to take advantage of that. New technologies can make learning fun, or at least a little less boring, and then kids will want to learn.

10

Female: Have you seen the e-mail from Chris? Isn't it great that we can work from home two days a week?

Male: Yeah, but did you notice that your boss decides when?

Female: I did, I suppose it's for making sure that people are around for meetings, and that we still work as a team. After all, if you never see someone, how can you work well together?

Male: That's true, and working in the same space is all part of the fun. I just think that your boss making decisions stops it being a flexible system, doesn't it? You're still having to ask for permission every week.

Female: So, I got called in by my line manager the other day and she was fuming. She launched into a long speech about how I'd messed up all the travel arrangements for one of her business trips to India, I thought this was so unlike me. I always pride myself in paying attention to detail, I was getting more and more panicky and I thought that I'd be fired. Then I glanced at a bit of paper in front of her, and I realised that I was off sick on the day the arrangements were made. It was difficult to keep a straight face after that.

I went to town in the car to buy some food for the cats, it was raining hard when I came out of the store and I ran to the car. I pulled hard at the door handle, but it wouldn't open. I pulled and pulled and suddenly I heard a scream, I looked through the car window and saw an elderly man in the front passenger seat, he looked terrified. I was trying to open a car that looked just like mine, but it wasn't. I didn't know where to look or what to do.

Male: Thank you for talking to us today.

Female: Thanks for inviting me.

Male: Economic figures for the last quarter will be published later today, and there are rumours that they won't be good. Can you comment on that?

Female: You'll forgive me if I don't comment on specific numbers that have been mentioned in the media.

Male: I realise that.

Female: But the government expects economic performance to be broadly in line with expectations for the last quarter. That would suggest a slight drop in output, mirroring the general world economy.

Male: I understand that the world economic outlook is not positive but we seem to be doing worse than similar countries around the world.

Female: Well, we have put measures in place that will boost economic activity, such as tax cuts and other incentives.

- Female: Is this plastic container recyclable, or not?
- Male: They wouldn't be recycled where I live, but here at the company I have no idea.
- Female: They haven't provided any receptacles for that kind of recycling anyway.
- Male: I know what you're saying, but on the other hand, I'm not absolutely convinced that simply putting it in the correct container leads to it getting recycled properly.
- Female: Really, you don't think they just bury it or incinerate it, do you?
- Male: I'm not convinced, there's still too much talk about the cost of recycling, and that's missing the point in my opinion.
- Female: What do you mean?
- Male: Well, with the limited resources on this little planet of ours, it shouldn't be a matter of how much it costs financially.

Female: Did you see that report on how languages are dying out at an astonishing rate?

Male: I did, it was quite an interesting read actually, but I think they're going about it all wrong. By focusing solely on education they're missing the bigger picture.

Female: But isn't that the best way? The languages gain prestige and younger generations feel a sense of pride when speaking them. It's a win-win.

Male: Usefulness beats pride I'm afraid, I can't believe that they don't understand that you wouldn't learn something that you hardly ever use, these languages need to be relevant to the 21st Century with strong online representation. Without that, young people won't care will they? It will all have being in vain once the older generation disappears.

Female: Well, we're getting rid of the image that we're a dying company, aren't we, so it's not exactly a bad thing to be doing, is it? And yeah, perhaps the amount of restructuring seems a bit excessive, but it will help us get rid of a bit of dead weight. Of course they'll be loads of redundancies, but just think of how future new highs will change staff outlook for the better. They'll come with new energy and new ideas. Current staff will fight it every step of the way, the value of our stocks and shares will decrease in the short term, but we have to keep pushing forward, don't we? Without this move, we'll risk not being a player in today's market.

- Male: I was getting our drinks when I saw a man over there reading a newspaper article about another drone sighting at an airport.
- Female: How can a little radio controlled flying vehicle close down an airport?
- Male: Well, they aren't so little these days, at least not the professional ones. The drones used commercially by photographers for example are pretty big.
- Female: Big enough to bring down a passenger aircraft?
- Male: Possibly, search online and you'll find test videos flying them into wing sections of aircraft and they make a big hole when they impact.
- Female: What can they do about it? They can hardly ban them.
- Male: Why not, they could become a massive security concern.
- Female: True enough I suppose, but that would upset people who had already bought one.

Female: We've got the results of the surveys back, one thing stands out, we have a problem with the public's perception of us. Despite our best efforts to modernise and meet the demands of the 21st Century, it seems it's just not enough, but we can work on it. We've called in sustainability experts, they're going to be taking a good look at our operations to see where we can make the necessary changes. Working in parallel, our public relations team are going to be putting out press releases, ad campaigns, you name it. Anything that shows that we're socially conscious and taking responsibility. I mean obviously this is an ongoing process, but we should start to see the positive effects within six months.

Female: For a large part of the population in the richer countries in the world, the people have no need for more stuff. There is probably a strong connection with this in the expanding volume of research linking experiences to happiness. Apparently happiness comes more from buying experiences rather than things. However, this only applies if you are spending spare money. The difference between them is that it doesn't matter if the experience is cheap or expensive. Buying an expensive car might be more exciting than going to the cinema with friends, however the thrill of a new car soon fades, while the relatively low cost of the cinema means you can keep going and it remains effective at giving you happiness.

Male: What does your name mean, Saba?

Female: Well, it means seven in Swahili, my parents are from Rwanda, so they wanted to name me something that reflected our heritage.

Male: Do you speak Swahili with them?

Female: Yes, and sometimes French, it's one of the official languages in Rwanda, so my parent's generation all had to learn it and they wanted me to speak it too.

Male: Wow, I only did French and Spanish at school. I can get by in French but my Spanish is pretty rusty now. I started learning Arabic about three years ago but it's slow progress.

Female: I've always wanted to learn Arabic because of its influence on Swahili. I haven't had the chance yet, but hopefully soon.

It is generally agreed that the modern concept of social media began in 1996 with SixDegrees.com. My own first contact with this world was Myspace, which started in 2003. The rest as they say, is history. Part of that history that has become increasingly important in recent years has been the ability to spread news at lightning speed. Unfortunately, this has proved to be easier to abuse, with people spreading so-called news that is untrue. This can be done due to an honest belief that it is true or it can be the result of people or organisations intentionally spreading misleading information for their own purposes. In the next part, we will look at how this happens.

- Male: Okay everyone, so we're debating the topic, what's better for school children, individual sports or team sports?
- Female: Well, I think they've both got a bunch of advantages, but overall team games are much better.
- Male: Any particular reason for that?
- Female: Yes, well if you're in a team you have this feeling, this obligation that you can't let people down. So, that makes you more committed to what you're doing, to help fellow team members and all that. And sometimes doing sport just by yourself can be boring, can't it?
- Male: I agree, and you can develop communication and negotiation skills too, right?
- Female: Yes, and all these skills come in handy in other areas of life, as well as in sport, we could call them life skills, couldn't we?

In the past a serious barrier to working with bilingual clients was the scarce availability of information about other languages, regarding phonological issues, descriptions of syntax, morphology and cultural knowledge. A great deal of research has been carried out in these areas in recent years, and data are now available for many languages. These data include specific resources for speech and language therapists working in languages other than English. Much is still to be done in this area, but for most families resident in the UK, therapists no longer need to work from a blank slate. Attitudes towards bilingualism of both the individual and of societies in general can often be critical factors in determining the value that clients and families give their home language.

Female: As we sell 60% of our products to high street retail outlets, it is important to understand the trends in this important business sector. It is a sector that is very sensitive to economic variations. While rises in energy prices, local taxes and pension payments for its workers have not really had any obvious impact, a significant factor is the continued rise in online shopping. This factor has led to a decline in the number of retail shops. We need to keep this in mind when planning for the future. This presentation will look at ways we could continue to provide cost effective products for this sector, in a period of reduced demand whilst also diversifying into other business areas.

- Male: Banning plastic straws, seriously, pretty soon any type of plastic is going to be illegal.
- Female: But isn't that the whole point? There's already far too much plastic floating around in places where it shouldn't be, at least the government is finally doing something about it.
- Male: Don't tell me you expect everyone to stop using plastic, just like that? These things take time.
- Female: And that's one thing we don't have, we need to act now.
- Male: So, what do you suggest, suddenly go back to using natural materials, like in the good old days?
- Female: Well, that's a good place to start, but it's hardly going to put an end to all our problems. New ones will just crop up, better to just stop using so much in the first place.
